Key Findings

A great workplace for women helps create a great workplace for all.

Companies with smaller gaps in survey scores between women and men also have, on average, much smaller disparities in work experience for employees of color, LGBT team members, Millennials, part-timers and even people at different pay levels.

Equitable employers are also welcoming places to do business.

At the Best Workplaces for Women, 95 percent of all employees say they enjoy a friendly environment, and 93 percent feel customers would describe their services as "excellent".

Involvement inspires loyalty.

Women who say they're treated as full members of the team - regardless of position - are 5x more likely to plan a long-term future at their organizations.

Buy-in pays off.

Women who say they make a difference at their organizations are 27x more likely to describe their companies as great places to work.

When women report a fair and fulfilling work environment, it's a strong indicator that other segments of the workforce feel the same way. That's important: Our research shows that companies held in high regard for equity and employee trust experience significantly faster revenue growth than their peers."
